Good Morning CRPS Families,

We did it! Our first day of remote learning was a tremendous success due to the incredible work and effort of every member of our school community. To accomplish this feat, every parent, educator, and child demonstrated flexibility and teamwork...not to mention a healthy dose of patience and optimism!

Throughout the course of our first remote instructional day, our staff and students remained “connected” through methodologies such as Zoom video conferencing, Screencastify Morning Meetings, Google Hangout Reading Groups, Google Classrooms, and Twitter feeds. The flow of supportive e-mails and picture exchanges were constant. A hallmark of our Primary School community will always remain our commitment to one another and the continued success of students.

I had the pleasure of receiving dozens of photos yesterday of students engaged in great learning experiences. Children were captured watching video clips of our chicks hatching from the eggs in our Science Enrichment Lab. Mrs. Kilyk has named them after Disney characters...check out her Twitter feed (@CRPS Stem Lab) to see our sweetest additions to our school!

Our students and families are always very conscientious, and that is appreciated! In these uncertain days, try to remember to carve out time each day for experiences that do not surround on only the remote learning assignments. These days present perfect opportunities for board games, walks in the neighborhood, sitting outside and observing the night sky, movie nights, riding bikes, building blanket forts, etc... Our attitudes will leave a lasting impression on our children. Let's try to make their memories of this unprecedented situation be one than recalls some special moments with family.

Finally, I want to share just a few of the photos that brought smiles to my face. Children took over daily morning announcements and continued the Music in Our Schools Musical "Announcements." Students enjoyed the "face-to-face" exchanges with their teachers, and lots of St. Patrick's Day projects and leprechaun traps were created. Keep the pictures coming!

Enjoy the sunshine today!

Warmly,

Tricia Barr
