Teacher's Corner

Find a New Friend by Lisa Ashton

Wow! It is hard to believe that the second nine-week session has arrived already, and the holidays are just around the corner. I would like to point out, as a reading teacher, that reading is the most important subject to master. If you can't read and apply what you read to your everyday life, then no other subject will be possible to master.

I like to think of reading as a life line, and a good book, as a best friend. Whether you are having a great day, an OK day, or a not so good day, a good book, like a good friend, can turn any day into a SUPER day. I would like for my students to think about this the next time they are selecting a book, or any form of literary text.

Here are some things to consider when you are choosing your literary friend: Choose a form of text that is interesting to you. The text should be at your reading level, or a few points higher. Consider any type of text, it doesn't just have to be a book.

Finally, find a quiet and comfortable place to sit and enjoy your new best friend.

Throughout the next week, I will be mentioning a great book that I am reading right now. If you hear me mention it, fill out the box below, cut it out, and bring it to me. I will draw from all the right answers, and award a prize.
