In Christian's own words...

I am a Christian and as such my faith can and often does inform how I see some mental health issues. I feel strongly that all counselors need to have exceptional clinical skills to help people with a wide variety of mental health issues. I also believe that a strong biblical foundation is necessary when it comes to the discipline of counseling. These two approaches, Clinical and Biblical, is where I focus much of my work and how I assess a given situation. Your mental health issues are real and they can be a burden. My goal is to help you understand your mental health needs from a clinical perspective, walk with you through your story, offer a biblical foundation and show grace, care, compassion and competence.
