Well, we all have our own abilities and disabilities but they can help us. For example, I have autism. You might not exactly know what that is. Well it means, your brain is set up differently. But it won't stop me. I'm one of the greatest students in my class. I feel that it can have some challenges also. I sometimes can not speak the right way. Or I need to be away from other people so I'm not distracted. But all in all I'm a really awesome kid! Autism has its challenges but for me, I would never give it away. And I know... any kid can be truly AWESOME. All you need to have it is confidence and to truly embrace that any kid can be awesome no matter what. In the end. But the most amazing part of awesomeness is being different from one another. Difference is what makes all of us cool. Sweet, kind, happy, unique, and beautiful on the inside. Just to be awesome we have to really embrace awesome. Even if it's hard you can be awesome no matter what, everyone's abilities and disabilities are what separate us from everybody else. Because being different is being beautiful.
