Counseling Corner

- In a world full of challenges and difficult times, we can give our kids skills so that these challenges won't defeat them. We can help to build their resilience. Resilience is the ability to bounce back from hard experiences which expands our capacity to recover from or adapt to adversity and stress. Some specific ways to build resilience are:

- 1. Nurture optimism. The brain can be rewired to be more optimistic through the experiences it is exposed to. The idea is to focus on what is left rather than what has been lost.
- 2. Increase their exposure to people who care about them. Kids won't always notice the people who are in their corner cheering them on, so when you can, let them know about the people in their fan club. Help build their connections with people who love and strengthen them.
- Let them know that it's okay to ask for help. Being brave doesn't mean dealing with things by ourselves but instead, it's knowing when and who to ask for help.
