COLLEGE SPOTLIGHT

Rutgers University

Fun fact about Rutgers - The first college football game was played on a field at Rutgers in 1869 and it was the College of New Jersey (present day Princeton) vs. Rutgers University. In what might be considered a beginning to college football rivalries, immediately after Rutgers won this game, Princeton's players were literally run out of town by the winning Rutgers students.

Rutgers University is a large, public university located in New Brunswick, New Jersey. There is always someplace new to explore on one of Rutgers-New Brunswick's five campuses: Busch, Livingston, College Avenue, Douglass, George H. Cook. The university provides over 40,000 students annually with powerhouse academic programs. Rutgers has 20 different schools and colleges, over 100 undergraduate majors, and over 200 graduate degree programs. The university has a great athletics program with approximately 650 student varsity athletes who compete in the Big Ten conference.

They have undergraduate schools of Arts & Sciences, Business, Engineering, Environmental & Biological Sciences, Performing & Visual Arts, Nursing, and Pharmacy (6 year PharmD).

CAREER SPOTLIGHT

Postsecondary Teachers (Professors, Instructors)

Postsecondary teachers instruct students in a wide variety of academic and technical subjects beyond the high school level. They may also conduct research and publish scholarly papers and books.

Work Environment

Most postsecondary teachers work in public and private colleges and universities, professional schools, and junior or community colleges. Outside of class time, their schedules are generally flexible, and they may spend that time in administrative duties, advising students, and conducting research.

How to Become a Postsecondary Teacher

Educational requirements vary by subject and the type of educational institution. Typically, postsecondary teachers must have a Ph.D. However, a master's degree may be enough for some postsecondary teachers at community colleges, and others may need work experience in their field of expertise. Postsecondary teachers who work for 4-year colleges and universities typically need a doctoral degree in their field. Some schools may hire those with a master's degree or those who are doctoral degree candidates for some specialties, such as fine arts, or for some part-time positions.

Doctoral programs generally take multiple years to complete, and students must already possess a bachelor's or master's degree before enrolling in a doctoral program. Doctoral students spend time writing a doctoral dissertation, which is a paper presenting original research in the student's field of study. Candidates usually specialize in a subfield, such as organic chemistry or European history.

Community colleges or career and technical schools also may hire those with a master's degree. However, some fields have more applicants than available positions. In these situations, institutions can be more selective, and they frequently choose applicants who have a Ph.D. over those with a master's degree.

Job Outlook

Overall employment of postsecondary teachers is projected to grow 15 percent from 2016 to 2026, much faster than the average for all occupations. Enrollment at postsecondary institutions is expected to continue to rise. The majority of employment growth is likely to be in part-time positions.

2017 Median Pay	$76,000 per year
Typical Entry-Level Education	PhD. in field of interest
Number of Jobs, 2016	1,314,400
Job Outlook, 2016-26	15% (Much faster than average)
Employment Change, 2016-26	197,800

Keep at it and you will eventually get it done...
