

Middle School Social Studies Teacher

Sandia Preparatory School is looking for a dynamic, knowledgeable history teacher who is passionate about teaching middle school students. This position, which begins in August 2019, includes five sections of middle school history, both sixth-grade Global and Cultural Studies and eighth-grade United States History through the Civil War. Prep history teachers use a variety of methods in class, including project-based learning and traditional research and writing. The department is highly collaborative and supportive, as is the Prep community as a whole. All full-time faculty lead an activity of their choosing and participate in the life of the school outside of the classroom. Qualified candidates must have a degree in social studies, and successful teaching experience is preferred. Interested applicants should send a resume and cover letter to Ms. Susi Hochrein, Head of Middle School, at jobs@sandiaprep.org. No phone calls please.

Full-time faculty receive a competitive salary and benefits. Sandia Preparatory School is an equal opportunity employer.
