

Building For Our District's Future

Carlisle Community School District Bond Referendum

Bond Referendum Election Results

Carlisle CSD voters overwhelmingly approved a $17 million "no tax increase" bond referendum that will fund a number of projects at Carlisle schools. The Carlisle School District's bond referendum to borrow $17 million for their Phase II Projects passed with an 85% approval in April's election. The vote was 682 in favor (84.9%) and 121 against on the bond referendum.

Responding to the election results, Superintendent Bryce Amos said, "I want to say a big 'thank you' to the voters of the Carlisle School District. They saw the needs to make improvements and invest in the futures of our students and this community. They have a long history of supporting our schools and supporting our kids."

Why

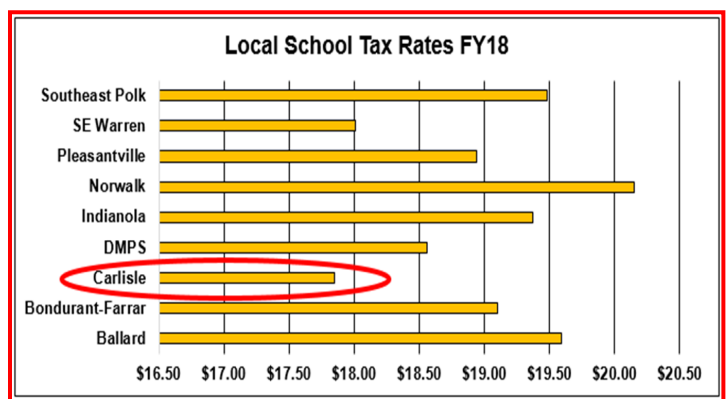

Since 2006 the district has grown by over 500 students in total enrollment serving 2,250 students this school year. As a direct result of the growth of the district and the city of Carlisle, the district needs to expand and improve facilities to support growing school and community programs.

Current facilities cannot support district-wide events such as high school graduation nor does the current gymnasium meet state criteria to host post-season regional level events. District-wide upgrades necessary to restructure and equip our classrooms for 21st century learners. Energy efficiency upgrades are also needed to provide better learning environments and reduce district energy costs.

Impact on School Tax Levy

The bond referendum will have a neutral impact on the school tax levy. The current tax levy already includes the $4.05 Debt Service levy amount previously approved by district patrons. One of the district promises to the community is to be a good steward of taxpayer dollars. Over the past eight years the school board has reduced the school tax levy by a total of $3.11. The school tax levy is only a portion of your total property tax bill. The tables displays the history of the school tax levy.
