Teacher Appreciation Week

By Sarah Vidovic

Teachers are out of this world! Now is your chance to let them know how much you appreciate them. Teacher Appreciation Week is on Monday May 6th to Friday May 10th. Teachers are very influential and do a lot for us, but are not really appreciated enough. Every day each teacher wakes up early to teach us and prepare us for life. Education is very important in the world and we wouldn't have it without teachers.

Throughout this week, it's the time to show your teachers how much you appreciate them. Return the favor to your teachers and do something kind each day. Something as small as a compliment or a favor. Show them the respect you have by paying attention in class and participating.

Perhaps you can assist your teachers by cleaning up small messes in their room, assisting other students with classwork for them, or even just telling them that you appreciate the work that they do for you and your fellow students.

Teacher Interview with Ms. Opsahl

By Teacher Support committee

What made you want to become a teacher?

Before I was a teacher, I worked in the travel/tourism industry and was asked to train a class of 40 people on a new computer system. I loved it and decided to get my master's degree in education and teach!

What's your favorite thing to do outside of school?

I like to hang out with my family/friends and cook, eat, and nap.

What's the most creative thing you ever done ?

I helped my friend, who was in film school at USC, make her movie. I played a small role in it too!

Who are your heroes or role models ?

At the moment, AOC! (Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez)

What is your personal philosophy?

The golden rule: Treat people the way you want to be treated.

Studying for Finals

By Student Morale Committee

Studying for finals is important because you need to understand what you are doing and you need to pass your test. You should study things that you do not understand and are unclear on, or even things you do know just to be safe. Here are some helpful tips to help you study correctly:

1. Pick a place and time: Know when and where you can study without any distractions
2. Study as much as possible: Study as much as you can to understand the subject better
3. Take a break: Don't overwork yourself
4. Review your work: Make sure all your notes are correct and legible to read
