

CAUTION!

Eastern Equine Encephalitis is particularly active this year in southern New England

Eastern Equine Encephalitis (EEE) is a serious disease transmitted by mosquitoes

Protect yourself and your family from mosquito bites that spread the virus:

- When outdoors, use EPA-approved bug spray
- Put insect netting over strollers and playpens to keep bugs away from small children
- Wear long sleeves and long pants whenever possible, particularly if you are outdoors during dawn and dusk

For more information visit www.health.ri.gov/mosquito

