School and Community

Rolling Hills Preparatory School (RHP), founded in 1981, is an independent coeducational day school for grades six through twelve, located in a residential community outside of Los Angeles. Students are drawn from diverse economic, ethnic, religious, and social backgrounds. Approximately 54% of our students receive some degree of financial aid. About 58% of our students self-identify as students of color, making RHP one of the most diverse schools in the area.

The Four Pillars of Rolling Hills Prep School define and guide everything we do inside and outside the classroom: Disciplined Minds, Sound Character, Healthy Bodies, and Creative Spirits. We aim to graduate young citizens who are highly prepared in the social-emotional realm as well as in academic knowledge and skills. While a degree of specialization and acceleration is encouraged for our top students through our three Specialized Diplomas, we also counsel balance in our students' lives. Our measure of success is the very high rate at which our students complete college successfully within four years.
