May is Asian American History Month

Mink, a civil rights champion, was the 1st Asian American woman elected to Congress. She is best known for co-authoring the Title IX Amendment of the Higher Education Amendment, which requires equal financing for women's sports and education programs. Breaking new ground for women and ethnic groups, though, was nothing new for her. The road to Congress was paved with many firsts such as being elected the first female class president in her high school and being the first Japanese American woman to practice law in Hawaii. Mink's dedication to helping others has resulted in legislative reforms in health care, education, women's rights, civil rights, conservation, employment and environmental affairs.
