

Mr. Sandor
Yearbook
Syllabus

Students working on the Harpeth High School yearbook will be given a unique opportunity to truly leave their mark and small legacy for years to come. As a result, students working on the yearbook will have several expectations set forth to help guide them and keep them true to their work.

Students working on the yearbook need to have skills in working with others, sharing ideas, taking constructive criticism, and an open mind. Students will be learning to work with new programs that allow them to create the final product that will be showcased to the entire school staff and student body, as well as the community.

Students will need to come ready and prepared every day to work and be on time to do so. Failure to do not only sets the student up for their own personal failure, but can be detrimental to the rest of the students working on creating the final product.

Students need to bring with them pencil and notebook every day to the class; notes and annotations will be made, and this will be checked to see where each student is contributing to creating the piece.

Rules for the class are as follows:

1. Be quiet when Mr. Sandor is giving instruction
2. Respect your peers when they are talking
3. Respect your peers when working in groups
4. Be on time
5. Bring supplies with you every day (Pencil and notebook)

Students will be learning and expected to work with deadlines and how to utilize time management skills while in this classroom; this is an important skill that will work with you not only for the yearbook, but for other aspects of your life as well.
