As part of our compliance with federal guidelines, our most recent Federal School Report Card has been posted to the Kemp ISD website. The federal report cards are designed to inform parents and guardians about a school's achievement performance, teacher quality data, graduates in higher education and NAEP results. Each district that receives Title I, Part A funding is responsible for making the state, district and campus level report cards available to the general public. You may access the district and campus reports at the following link:

Mrs. Gentzler's Challenge for the Week:

Since we have celebrated Dr. Seuss's Birthday all this week, I am looking for a summary of events. Be specific with details! Also, make sure I have a great illustration to go with the summary! I will have prizes for the first student from each grade level who turns in the assignment. Good Luck!

Teacher's Corner

No plans for Spring Break? Not wanting to spend a lot of money? Me either. There are some cheap and easy activities to do with your family that week. The following are some great ideas to celebrate Spring Break with family and encourage bonding and academics. These are a few of my favorites but there are so many more activities to be explored with your child and not break the bank.

1. Back yard fun- Turn your backyard into your very own resort destination. You can play all types of different sports, such as ultimate Frisbee or volleyball. Think outside the box and come up with your own unique backyard fun. Have your child help you plan the destination (where you want to go and budget how much money you would need).
2. Cook together- A skill your child should have as an adult is the ability to cook good food. Spend the week with your kids challenging and expanding your abilities. As a family, research and find recipes of food you have never attempted. Try a new one each day. Have your kids involved every step along the way (this also, reinforces math and reading skills). Have your child read the recipe to you and ask them how they would double or triple it for a bigger crowd.
3. Enjoy Nature Activities- Enjoy some of the new life nature is starting to share with us. Play games outside, go on a treasure hunt, or rough it in the backyard. There are so many nature activities for kids that will turn them off of their electronic gadgets and turn them on to the great outdoors.
4. Read outdoors- Grab the books and head outside. Plan an afternoon reading picnic during Spring Break. Spread a blanket in the grass. Take a few books outdoors and bring the pages to life to turn your kids into book lovers. Read to each other. Flip through picture books. What matters most is the quality time you spend showing your kids the importance of sitting down with a good book.
5. Plant Spring Flowers- The ground has thawed and that barren patch of dirt is practically begging for some color. Plant spring flowers with your children during their time off from school. Take them to the nursery and let them choose some of the flowers for your spring garden. There are plenty of fun gardening projects for kids, regardless of their ages. Again, this is a good time to have them research flowers and decide on the amount of money needed to purchase them.
