

Teacher/coach Jay Bauer is helping coordinate the annual high school bookstore seasonal sale.

Putting the ‘spirit’ back in spiritwear

Dec. 15 bookstore sale offers discounts for fans, aid for needy

Story by Leah Musselman and Montgomery Grein

Photos by Montgomery Grein

Tribal Tribune staff

Team spirit can be expensive ... that’s why the Fairfield High School bookstore will open its doors Saturday, Dec. 15, with its annual winter spiritwear seasonal sale.

And while savvy shoppers find deals, they will also be helping the school and those who may need a little extra help this holiday season.

Teacher Jay Bauer, who also coaches girls volleyball at the high school, is helping to coordinate the sale. He notes that some students don't have enough money for food or other important necessities, and that the proceeds of the bookstore items always anonymously help those students out.

In addition, said Bauer, "The sales help make improvements to the school, (or go to) prom or homecoming dresses, or if people may need a little help with food on the weekends.

"Ultimately, what we make here goes back into the school and back into (helping) the students."

So if fans of Fairfield athletics head out to the sale, not only will they getting some seasonal spiritwear at what Bauer says is a great price, but they also will be helping the schools and the community.

Some details about the sale pricing, according to Bauer, include, "We're going to open up and have 15 percent off, and everyone will get a gift if they spend $20."

There will also be new stock options: "We definitely have some top-sellers that we're bringing back and also some new stuff for the winter weather."

All in all, this new sale seems to put the spirit back in spiritwear.

– 30 –

If You Go

- Event: FHS Seasonal Bookstore Sale
- Date: Dec. 15
- Time: 9 a.m.-noon
- Location: The FHS bookstore is located next to the high school cafeteria and bookkeeper's office