Teacher's Corner

I am reminded of my time in the United States Air Force. I entered right after graduating high school, which some might remember was towards the end of the Vietnam Era. Since this month has our "Celebrate Freedom Week" in it, I thought this would be a good time to do a little reflecting.

As I look at my students and ask, "What is Freedom", many give blank stares and slowly a few raise their hands and give some examples. This renews my vigor for wanting to give more education on many things but this one topic for sure.

I did not solely enter the military and cause you to be free. I did however go into the military to continue the process of maintaining our country's freedom and for those we call our Allies. We enjoy lots of freedoms, we can speak freely as long as we do not infringe upon the rights of another. We can own weapons to defend our country and self. We can enjoy our own kinds of religion and speak about it freely to others. We do not have worry about someone coming along and taking away the things we hold dear without cause. We are all afforded the right to a just and fair trial and the right to a speedy trial. All these and others were first given unto us by our Forefathers in the Bill of Rights. What forward thinkers they were!

Remember all of those that came before and that will come after, defending our country and all of our freedoms. The attack on our soil, September 11, 2001, took away a lot of people lives and freedoms and it also made us think more and more like our Forefathers did. Happy educating!
